

JOURNAL OF INSECT BEHAVIOR—Volume 1, 1988

Journal of Insect Behavior is an international forum for the publication of peer-reviewed original research papers and critical reviews on all aspects of the behavior of insects and other terrestrial arthropods, including (but not limited to): motor patterns and orientation; quantitative ethology; social behavior; behavioral ecology; neurophysiology of behavioral responses; pharmacological probes into behavior; genetic and developmental determinants; and theoretical, mathematical, and computer models of behavioral systems. Journal of Insect Behavior also publishes Short Communications, which are either brief theoretical or empirical papers on insect behavior or constructive critiques of recent published papers in this field, especially those in response to papers published in the journal. Thus, Journal of Insect Behavior is a forum not only for original research findings, but also for the free exchange of ideas and views based on those findings.
